A CONTENTS-SUBJECT INDEX to GENERAL & PERIODICAL LITERATURE

BIOGRAPHICAL, HISTORICAL, LITERARY, SCIENTIFIC, THEOLOGICAL, EDUCATIONAL, SOCIAL, GEOGRAPHICAL, and TOPOGRAPHICAL, etc.,

By A. COTGREAVE, F.R.Hist.S.,

(BOROUGH LIBRARIAN OF WEST HAM),

Author of "Views and Memoranda of Public Libraries," the "Encyclopædic Catalogue," "Pseudonyms and Anonyms," "Subject and Chronological Index to English Prose Fiction," etc.

This work is the only one issued in the United Kingdom which provides an alphabetical index to the contents of volumes of Essays, Biographical Collections, Magazines and Miscellanies, and thus brings within reach a vast amount of valuable matter which would otherwise be overlooked or remain unknown.

Academy.—"This book is a mine of useful references. Every entry is a piece of special information, and as there are many thousand entries, we consider that the Author has done a great service to literary workers and students."

Literary World.—"The Author has put all students of books under an obligation in compiling this valuable index. Not less than 100,000 volumes have been referred to, and every library should be supplied with a copy."

Westminster Review.—"It has been left to West Ham's Librarian to compile a work which supplies precisely the information required by the general reader. Most of us remember at times having seen an article on a certain subject in some magazine or periodical, but in many cases the name of the publication has escaped our memory, and the date nearly always. This book will almost certainly be found to contain the required reference, perhaps with many additional ones on the same subject. The book is a necessary adjunct to every library, either public or private."

Saturday Review.—"It represents a vast amount of work, and will be prized by students of current literature. Whatever its limitations, the book will be a boon to all who have to prepare topical essays."

WEST HAM PUBLIC LIBRARY, TECHNICAL INSTITUTE, AND PASSMORE EDWARDS MUSEUM.

LIBRARY NOTES.

A Quarterly Record of Library Transactions.

Vol. VI., No. 23.] APRIL, 1901. [PRICE, ONE PENNY.

NOTES FOR LIBRARY READERS.

AS it is not given to all our new readers, and possibly not even to all our older ones, to fully appreciate or understand the necessity of some of the arrangements adopted for the good service of the libraries (from which upwards of 300,000 volumes were borrowed last year) it appears opportune to explain their raison d'etre, in the first issue of this year's "Notes," and at the same time to give a little general information which may be useful to the readers and the general public.

THE LENDING LIBRARIES, which contain 30,000 volumes, are open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. for adults, and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. for juveniles; except on Bank Holidays and Wednesday in each week, when this department is closed for checking the stock, cleaning, &c. During these hours books can be borrowed; novels or story books for one week, other books for two weeks; such books can however, be renewed, or in special cases entered for a longer period when first issued, if not in great demand. Readers who have failed to obtain special books can bespeak them by leaving an addressed post card at the library. Each person is entitled to two ordinary tickets, one free and the other subject to a charge of 1d. Only one of these, however, is available for works of fiction. Extra tickets for music and magazines can be obtained at a small charge. All the tickets are available at any of the Borough Free Libraries, but the books must be returned to the library from which they have been borrowed. Every member of a family and every employé in any business, not under the age specified, is eligible to use the libraries if resident in the Borough. Forms of application, containing the rules and regulations, upon which tickets will be issued, can be obtained at the library counter. Catalogues and lists of recent books are placed on the tables or desks for the use of the public, while copies of these publications can be purchased for home use at a small sum. The borrower having obtained a ticket, will consult the catalogues (except for the last books added, which can be seen in a showcase on the counter) and having selected a book must refer to its catalogue number and class letter in the indicator, by which it can be instantly ascertained whether such book is in or out. BLUE is IN, RED is OUT. The chief advantages of the indicator are (1) that quite two thirds of the borrowers' and assistants' time is saved; (2) that if a book is in, the intending borrower is directly informed thereof by the indicator, and the book, even if misplaced, must be found; (3) that the books, by this system, are immediately available for re-issue when returned. The opportunities in "Open Access" and other libraries without an indicator, of planting books for, or by certain readers, and the risk of popular books being lost for months through misplacement, are practically non-existent where the indicator is used. In addition to the advantages of the indicator, the borrowers are allowed to have any number of books to examine before selecting one for home reading. Loans of books from the Lending Libraries average about 1,171 daily.

Attention is called to the necessity of charging a small fine on books kept out longer than allowed, as otherwise many popular books would remain idle or mislaid in the houses of their readers, much to the inconvenience and annoyance of borrowers waiting for their return. One of the most vexed questions in any library is that of injury to books, and our readers are earnestly requested to examine their books before leaving the library and call attention to any damage which is not noted and initialled by the librarian. A useful and handsome little book-cover and book-mark combined, can be obtained in the library at 4½d., the cost price. This is a great protection to a book while out of the library.

THE REFERENCE LIBRARIES contain 25,700 volumes and are open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Many of the finest art and science publications of the day are available in this department, without limit as to number of volumes, while it is probable that outside of the British Museum no other library possesses so comprehensive a collection of Essex books. Topographical works relating to other counties and towns (especially London) and the leading reviews and publications of societies are also well represented. Books can be obtained by merely filling in forms with the titles of those required, and address of reader. Copying is permitted but not tracing. Readers must not use ink in taking extracts, or copying drawings, and the books when done with must in all cases be returned to an assistant and not left on the tables or counters. Neglect of this rule has resulted in the loss of valuable works. The card-catalogue, which is kept in drawers lettered alphabetically, is arranged on a comprehensive system and gives the authors, titles, and subjects of all the books; and frequently, also subjects in the books—if sufficiently important—are given separate entries. Lists of recent additions, and also the "Contents-Subject Index," recently published by the library authorities, are also provided for the use of the readers. The books of the lending libraries are available for reference, except those required at the time for lending out. Attendance, 306 daily.

THE GENERAL NEWSROOMS are open each week day from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m., and on Sunday from 3 to 9 p.m., and are supplied with over 1000 papers and magazines representing all topics, directories, railway time tables, and other guides. For the greater convenience of the readers an alphabetical and numerical guide to the stands or tables is provided, by which any publication can be found at once. Files of the back numbers are kept. The approximate daily attendance is 3,000.

THE LADIES' ROOM (Central Library) which is in the charge of a lady assistant, is open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., and is supplied with several daily and weekly papers, including fashion papers and some containing special information on domestic and other matters of interest to lady readers. The room is greatly appreciated, the daily attendance frequently exceeding 100. At Canning Town a portion of the reference library is used for ladies, several tables being reserved entirely for their use and provided with the usual papers. The attendance is about 54. Average daily total for both libraries, 132.

THE LIBRARY AIDS consist mainly of the catalogues, indicators, key to indicators, "Library Notes," Hand Lists, "Subject Index," and Suggestion Books. The temporary catalogue of the Central Library is nearly sold out, and a much larger and more useful one (the catalogue proper) is being prepared. The temporary catalogue, together with the special numbers of "Library Notes" recently published, and the juvenile catalogue, contain almost all the books in the Central Lending Library. The Canning Town catalogue is a complete guide to the main stock of the lending library there, and is compiled on a very convenient plan. A supplementary catalogue bringing the work up to date is now being prepared, while in the meantime the "Library Notes," published quarterly, contains all recent additions. The "Library Notes" has successfully met the want of the readers to procure up-to-date lists of new books, and serial stories and articles in the magazines. The West Ham Libraries were among the first to publish such a journal, and demonstrated its advantages to such effect that most libraries of any importance are now following suit and providing similar guides. Among other useful features of this journal are the descriptive notes in connection with various books whose catalogue titles are not a sufficient guide to the reader, while the title on the book-backs is still more curtailed and would often cause a reader examining a bookcase to pass the very book that would suit him, and take down some other work whose title was more prominent and taking, to find it, after wasting his time and labour, entirely unsuitable. The last number of "Library Notes" contains some 5,000 volumes, consisting principally of the books added to the lending libraries during the last two years. As only a limited supply was printed the readers are strongly advised to procure copies, as it will be a considerable time before the new catalogues are printed.

To those seeking information on special subjects the "Contents-Subject Index" will in the majority of cases be found the most helpful guide in the libraries. It should of course, where the catalogue is at hand, be used in conjunction with that work, but a glance will show that for one subject referred to in any catalogue there are dozens given in the "Index," with references to books containing articles or notes dealing with them. The utility of the work is best shown by the fact that over 1,000 copies have been sold to libraries, &c., outside of the Borough, while all the leading literary journals and many prominent authors and librarians have highly commended it. Seeing that this work has been so kindly received elsewhere, that it relates principally to our own books, and last but not least, that it is offered to West Ham Library readers at half what is readily paid elsewhere, we certainly trust that a large number of the readers will recognise the labour and energy on their behalf bestowed upon the work, and will purchase copies at the very low price at which it is offered to them.

SUGGESTION BOOKS are kept for the purpose of readers writing in recommendations of books, &c., for the consideration of the committee.

In conclusion the Chief Librarian begs to remind the readers that he will be pleased to be consulted by anyone requiring information upon books or other library matters, or to provide typed lists of select books on any subject for readers requiring such help, and who cannot find sufficient information in the catalogues. The Librarian can be seen at his office, as a rule, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., or 6 to 9.30 p.m.

Jottings.

Mr. Passmore Edwards has again reminded us of his offer to present two branch libraries to the borough, as other towns are soliciting his help. The maintenance of these additional libraries at West Ham out of a penny rate, which has already to support two large central libraries, is likely to be difficult, but we sincerely hope, that with care and economy one, at least, may be secured, if not both.

This number of "Library Notes" contains an excellent portrait of the Chairman of the Libraries Committee, Mr. Councillor J. Weaver Smith. Portraits of previous Chairmen will be found in Nos. 2 (Alderman Hay, J.P.), 4 (Councillor East), 5 (Alderman Athey, Alderman Worland, J.P., and Councillor Hollingsworth), 7 (Councillor Alden, M.A.), 11 (Alderman Crow, J.P.), 15 (Councillor Jacobs), 18 (Councillor Billows, J.P.) Also illustrations of the West Ham, Birmingham, Boston, and British Museum Libraries, and of the Lucknow Museum, the Curator of which is a son of Councillor J. Moore Smith, J.P.

Copies of the Contents-Subject-Index, well bound in boards, can now be obtained in the Libraries by Library readers at the reduced price of 3/6; unbound, 2/6. Handsomely bound copies in cloth at 6/6. The price to the general public is 7/6, 6/-, and 10/6 respectively.

The Thames Iron Works Gazette for September, 1898, is required to complete a set of that Journal; if any of our readers possess a copy of this number, for which they have no further use, it would be welcomed either as a gift or purchase by the Libraries.

A large number of valuable books have been presented to the West Ham Libraries by the Lords of His Majesty's Treasury. The volumes include "Calendars of State Papers," "Acts of the Privy Council of England," "Chronicles and Memorials of Great Britain and Ireland, during the Middle Ages," etc. These fine works are available at both the Central and Canning Town Libraries, and should prove of the greatest service to the student of English History.

Among other gifts worthy of mention is a History of the Bible, profusely illustrated, presented by the executors of the late Rev. T. Crow, as also an interesting portrait of Humphrey Chetham, the first founder and donor of a free library in England. This has been presented by Dr. S. W. Cheetham, of Forest Gate, and can be seen in the Central Reference Library.

Any books can be obtained for examination in the Library before deciding upon one for home reading, by filling in a Book Examination Form, and handing it, with the borrower's ticket, to the assistants in charge of the Reference Library. The borrower will be held responsible for such books until they are returned.

Borrowers are reminded that all tickets which have been in use for two years are out of date, and must be renewed.

An examination of the various phases of life and work in their relation to morals and the attainment of happiness.

Biography and History.

Boer War. The Great Boer War, by A. Conan Doyle, 1900. 2777 B

Written in a hospital tent in the intervals of duty during the epidemic at Bloemfontein. The author was on the scene of the war, saw something of the military operations as well as of the chief actors in the great drama, including many Boers, and managed to obtain their views upon both political and military questions. Contains maps.

Siege of Mafeking, by J. Angus Hamilton, 1900. 2776 B

Articles contributed before and during the siege to "The Times" and "Black and White." Contains 15 illustrations and two plans.

Chamberlain (Rt. Hon. Joseph): The Man and the Statesman, by N. Murrell Morris, 1900. 2227 B

Illustrated with many portraits, reprints of cartoons, and other illustrations.

Cromwell (Oliver). Oliver Cromwell, by John Morley, 1900. 2265 B

In a note apologising for this "trespass in a field of study and research already so ably explored," Mr. Morley pleads that "any such career and character as Cromwell's must still be capable of an almost endless range of presentment and interpretation."

Napoleon: the Last Phase, by Lord Rosebery, 1900. 2442 B

The "last phase" refers, of course, to the life in captivity at St. Helena.

Owen (Professor Richard, Naturalist and Palæontologist, died 1892). Life, by his grandson, Rev. Richard Owen, 2 vols., illustrated, 1895. 1817 B

Contains also an essay by Huxley on Owen's position in Anatomical Science.

Ruskin (John). Life, by W. G. Collingwood, 1900. 1910 B

This is not a reprint of the author's "Life and Work of Ruskin;" it is on somewhat different lines. It contains more biographical details than most of the "Studies" of Ruskin and also some letters hitherto unprinted.

Victoria (Queen). Life of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, by Millicent Garrett Fawcett, 1901. 2074 B

Written in 1897, but the publishers have added a final chapter dealing with events since that date.

ALFRED THE GREAT.

THIS year being the millenary of the death of Alfred the Great, we take the opportunity of drawing attention to the books and magazine articles in the Library relating to that illustrious king, and contained in the list following this article. A brief sketch of his life may not be inappropriate. Alfred was born at Wantage in Berkshire in 849. He was the fifth son of Æthelwulf, King of Wessex, and Osburh, his first wife. From his father Alfred probably acquired the piety, the widened policy, the touch with other lands, the generosity, and the magnanimity which appeared in his life. From his mother he seems to have derived his great love of learning. When quite a lad the future king became proficient in the chief sport of his time, hunting, for Asser, the old chronicler, says "Alfred was a zealous practiser of hunting in all its branches, and hunted with great assiduity and success." He was also fond of the literature of his times, for the same authority says: "He listened with serious attention to the Saxon poems, which he often heard recited, and easily retained them in his docile memory." Whilst very young Alfred was taken to Rome and to the Court of Charles the Bald, and there heard and saw things that we know influenced his later life. In 858 King Æthelwulf died, and was succeeded by each of his four surviving sons until it came to Alfred's turn to reign in 871. During those years the coming of the Danes had given much trouble to the Saxon kings, and Alfred was only twenty-two when he had to face alone the problem of meeting the armies of the invaders. For fourteen years the king was almost continually fighting the Danes, with varying success. His conflicts with the enemy may be said to fall into three natural but not quite exclusive periods, two of them about equal in length, lasting seven years, and the third equal to the other two. The White Horse Hill in Berkshire remains to us as a memorial of the chief battle in the first period. From here the Danes were effectually driven back to Reading. After endless skirmishes a treaty was made, Alfred having to pay heavily, and the Danes retreated from Reading on London, which was then reckoned as belonging to Mercia and not to Wessex. Mercia was incapable of offering resistance, and London remained in the hands of the Danes till Alfred re-conquered it, re-settled it, and gave it the chance of becoming the capital of England.

After the above-mentioned treaty Alfred and Wessex had a three years' respite from the Danes, and in this precious breathing space the king conceived the happy idea of watching for the enemy by land and sea and then endeavouring to prevent their approach. Finding the mouth of the Thames carefully watched, fresh Danes crept along the coast, landed in Dorsetshire and established themselves at Wareham. Thence they emerged by stealth and took Chippenham by surprise. They seemed to swarm over the country in all directions, and Alfred was forced to defend himself at Athelney, a patch of firm ground in the midst of marshes formed by the Parret and the Tone. It is of this retreat that the well-known tales of the cakes and of the king's visit to the Danish camp disguised as a harper are told. Alfred's fortune was now at its lowest ebb, but in the early summer of 878 he met, fought, and conquered some Danes at Ethandune, and not long after, the famous compact, known as the Treaty of Wedmore, which influenced the relation of Dane and Saxon for a hundred years, was agreed upon, and brought to an end the first seven years' struggle with the invaders. When, some few years later, fresh hordes of northmen came with the intention of making a home here, they found a powerful fleet and an experienced army, under an able leader, the king, ready to oppose them on all sides. There were conflicts in all parts from London to Devonshire and Wales, but Hastings, the leader of the Danes, was not able to make much headway, and his hosts gradually melted away, some agreeing to settle down peaceably under Saxon law, some going north to Northumbria, others making their way to the North of France. At length Alfred learnt how to hold the enemy in check, and how to secure the peace of his kingdom both externally and internally. He laid the foundation of what has been the chief defence of our island ever since, the Navy, and saw that the ships composing the fleet were superior to those of the Danes. After the Treaty of Wedmore 878, Alfred, although subject to interruptions from fresh hordes of invaders, devoted many years to working out the designs he had made for the good of his people. He made a wise division of time, apportioned out the revenue of his country, set guards to protect his kingdom by land and sea, helped on a remarkable evolution in judicial organisation and ideas, and encouraged the culture of letters, art, and building, as well as the general education of his people. In reference to building it is worthy of note that Alfred stimulated the transition from wood to stone. The stone buildings of his period which survive still bear traces of being designed to imitate familiar wooden structures. One of the best examples is St. Michael's Church at Oxford; it served both as a church and as a tower to guard the north gate of the city. Alfred also read and translated many of the best books of his time. The last few years of his reign were peaceful, and the entry in the English chronicle for the year 901 begins thus, "This year died Alfred, son of Æthelwulf, six days before the mass of All Saints."

Jottings.

The latest editions of the following guides have been added to the Central Lending Library:—Bath, Belfast, Bournemouth, Bristol, Buxton, Clifton, Cornwall, Dorsetshire, Dublin, Eastbourne, Edinburgh, English Lakes, Galway, Glasgow, Glastonbury, Hampshire, Harrogate, Hastings, Ireland, Isle of Man, Killarney, etc., Liverpool, Manchester, Scarborough, Scotland, The Trossachs, Wales, Whitby.

Elinor Glyn, the author of the popular work recently added to the Library entitled "The Visits of Elizabeth," is Mrs. Clayton Glyn, of Sheering Hall, Essex.

Several new and comprehensive lives of Alfred the Great have been added to the lending departments of the libraries; these, together with the extensive list of works on the same subject printed in this number of "Library Notes," should be of interest to many readers.

Three interesting stories, illustrating the life and times of Alfred the Great, are catalogued in this number of "Library Notes," and should be interesting to boys and girls, for whom they are specially written.

Many new and interesting books are always on view in the show-cases in the lending departments. Readers choosing books from these show-cases should notify the same to the assistants at the counters.

We have much pleasure in thanking the gentleman who kindly presented to the libraries a back number of "The Thames Iron Works Gazette," which was out of print, and difficult to obtain, thus enabling us to keep our set perfect. We are also indebted to Mr. Councillor Alden, M.A., for numbers of the "Mansfield House Magazine."

Borrowers are reminded that they can obtain unbound copies of the "Contents-Subject-Index" at the very moderate price of 2/6. The price of the bound work to the general public is 10/6.

A view of the National Library of Ireland is given as a frontispiece to this number of "Library Notes." This State library, the tiny British Museum of Ireland, is almost exclusively a reference library. It is specially rich in books on Irish topography and history, fine arts, zoology and botany. The library was founded in 1877, the present building being opened in 1890.

Views of the Public Libraries of Westminster, Guernsey, and Bury are also given in this number.

Travels and Topography.

Antarctic Regions. First on the Antarctic Continent, by C. E. Borchgrevink, 1901 5076 C

An account of the British Antarctic expedition, 1898—1900, with portraits, maps and numerous illustrations.

Eastern Counties. Holidays in Eastern Counties. 4083 C

Gives interesting and instructive descriptions of the various places between London and the East Coast, with list of golf links, hotels, and other useful information for holiday makers.

London. East London, by Walter Besant, 1901. 5228 C

A volume of absorbing interest—"The City of Many Crafts," "The Pool and the Riverside," "The Factory Girl," "The Alien," "On Sports and Pastimes," are some of his themes. To most of us Sir Walter Beasant was an accepted interpreter of East London life, and there is all the old fascination about this book.

Malvern. The Malvern Country, by B. C. A. Windle, 1901. 4180 C

Morocco. Land of the Moors, by Budgett Meakin, 1901. 5242 C

A comprehensive description, with numerous illustrations from photographs, and a map.

Stratford-on-Avon, &c. Shakespeare's country, by Bertram C. A. Windle, 1899. 4247 C

Intended rather as a memorial of places and objects seen by visitors to Shakespeare's country, with some account of their history, than as a guide book, though even in this capacity it will be found very useful.

,, Juvenile ,, 2d.; ,, 8d.

West Ham Herald.—"We need only say that these Catalogues quite come up to the standard of excellence we have learned to expect in our Free Library publications."

West Ham Guardian.—"They have been classified in such a manner that any book can be found with a minimum of trouble. The excellent innovation has been made for giving contents of Magazines."

Forest Gate Weekly News.—"We have gone very carefully through these Catalogues, and have noted with pleasure how judicious have been the selections, and how thoroughly up to date the books are."

Canning Town General Catalogue, Boards, 6d.; Cloth, 1/-

Saturday Review.—"The General Catalogue of the Canning Town Library is one of the best books of its kind we have examined. We have had to comment with some severity of late years upon the slovenly preparation and confused method of various Public Library Catalogues. It is the more pleasant, therefore, to find this work admirable in arrangement, and remarkable for clearness and simplicity of treatment."

Canning Town Juvenile Catalogue, Boards, 3d.; Cloth, 6d.

The Athenæum.—"It is well arranged, with short descriptive notes and Subject Index."

Literary World.—"The Juvenile Catalogue of the West Ham Public Libraries might well serve as a model for future works of this kind."

London.—"This Catalogue will add greatly to the value of the Juvenile Library. Biographical and other notes have been inserted, and important articles included in many interesting works are catalogued under their respective subject headings, rendering an otherwise dry catalogue both interesting and instructive."

E. Walford, Esq., M.A.—"I most willingly bear my testimony to the value of your work."

Prof. Dziatzko, University Library, Gottingen.—"It is a most useful work."

W. Beer, Esq., Librarian, Howard Memorial Library, New Orleans.—"I am delighted with your excellent Index."

Daily Chronicle.—"The Subject Index to the contents of the books in the West Ham Public Libraries, will be of general service as a bibliography, and it will to some extent act as a supplement to Poole's Index to Periodical Literature, 1887-91, giving the principal contents of many of the leading magazines for 1892-97."

Dublin Review.—"The Editor of the Dublin Review (Canon Moyes) desires to thank you for the specimen copy of the Contents Subject Index, of which he has formed a high opinion, and has already found useful.

West Ham Library Notes (published quarterly), 1d.; Annual Subscription, 6d.

Educational Review.—"'Library Notes' contains descriptive notes of fresh additions to the Libraries, and also a list of interesting articles in current magazines and reviews. We congratulate the West Ham Library on the issue of this comprehensive, yet concise, journal, and express the hope that other Public Libraries will follow the example; for, as yet, we believe there are only two libraries which have adopted this admirable plan."

Literary World.—"The Committee of the West Ham Public Libraries are a progressive body. Their latest departure is 'West Ham Library Notes,' to deal exclusively with the libraries and library matters."

Literary World.—"The West Ham Public Libraries' report is very complete and encouraging. It is mainly statistical and analytical in its presentation of facts."

West Ham Herald.—"The Report of the Public Libraries presents us with an interesting account of the Public Library movement in West Ham. It is made additionally useful by the compilation of a number of lists and tables. These tables are extremely interesting."

West Ham Guardian.—"Our attention is drawn to the striking fact that out of the total issue of books, little more than one-third have been works of fiction. Another satisfactory point brought out by the West Ham statistics is that the libraries are used by every class, but chiefly by the working classes."

Souvenir of the Opening of the Central Library, 1898. Paper, 2/6; Cloth, 5/-

West Ham Herald.—"The work is of the highest class. The portraits of West Ham's leading public men are capitally reproduced."

FACT AND FICTION.

"WHEN the heathen philosopher had a mind to eat a grape, he would open his lips when he put it into his mouth, meaning, thereby, that grapes were made to eat, and lips to open." These are "Facts," and as such are detailed by Monsieur Touchstone, the clown, "a great lover of the same." "Shepherd," quoth he, "learn of me: To have is to have;" another sage maxim, and much acted upon in these enlightened times. Touchstone's relish, however, for "matter of fact" is but the substratum of a vein of humour which puts him a little out of the pale of your true and veritable matter-of-fact people. They—God help them!—don't understand jokes. They would no more think of disguising a fact under a covering of fun than an unsophisticated Costar Pearmain or Tummas Apple-tree would of metamorphosing a piece of fat bacon into a sandwich. They deal in simples, and love what's what for its own sake, as a patron of the "pure disinterestedness" system does virtue. In their vocabulary "whatever is, is right." They are of Sir Isaac Newton's opinion, who thought all poetry only "ingenious nonsense." They ask, with the professor of the mathematics who read Homer "What does the Iliad prove?" They are the precise antipodes to the lady who doated on Plutarch's Lives until she unluckily discovered, that, instead of being romances, they were all true. With the Irish bishop, they think Gulliver's Travels a pack of improbable lies, and won't believe a word of them! Some of their favourite authors are David Hume, Sir Nathaniel Wraxall, Pepys, Sir John Carr, Bubb Doddington, Sir John Mandeville, and John Wesley. While they eschew, as downright fables, the Waverley Novels, The History of John Bull, Robinson Crusoe, The Annals of the Parish, Sinbad the Sailor, Adam Blair, and Humphrey Clinker. If they meet with a book that is dull, "it is useful, for it contains matter-of-fact." If they happen to meet with one that is not dull, they say the same thing. They never for a moment, as other worthies sometimes do, mistake their imagination for their memory; for which there is perhaps a sufficient reason, "if philosophy could find it out." In short, all imaginative literature they call "light reading"; at the same time they are unaccountably shy of calling their own peculiar favourites heavy, which is odd enough, considering that they seem to estimate usefulness (upon which they lay mighty stress) a good deal by weight, and prefer, as in duty bound, "a pound of lead to a pound of feathers." They are most gravelled by the metaphysics, of which they are rather at a loss what to make. They contrive, however, to avoid studying them as being something "not tangible." To conclude—they write themselves under the style and title of "Lovers of Fact," and are yclept "matter-of-fact people" by the rest of Europe.

That

> "Facts are chiels wha winna ding
> An' downa be disputed,"

is a truth which Burns has, after his own manner, long ago asserted, and which will not be readily controverted. But still this is no more a reason for loving them, than it is for a henpecked husband to love his better-half, because he dare not contradict her. "Facts are indisputable things," quoth Doctor Dryasdust. Very true; but so much the worse; for, in that case, there is an end of the conversation. Rosalind knew better when she recommended "kissing" as "the cleanest shift for a lover lacking matter"; for if it be resisted, argues she, "this breeds more matter"—a result the very reverse of the doctor's definition. It is a strange thing, but in all ages divers potent, grave, and reverend signors seem to have got it into their heads that "a fact," as they call it, has a sort of intrinsic value, as a fact, per se. They attach a mystical and peculiar value to it, as mortals (before the new birth of the political economists) used to do to gold, without reference to its uses, its origin, or its adjuncts. Adam Smith and Peter Macculloch have put the gold doctrine to flight; but the other, its twin brother, remains there still, "unabated and envenomed." "Facts," say they triumphantly, "are true; now fiction is untrue." Very well, doctor; and suppose it were the reverse. Suppose the "fact" was untrue and the fiction true—what then? This is a sort of query that sometimes makes a man's head spin like a teetotum, and what an effect were this to befall a head that never spun anything but almanacks during life? "Tilly Vally!" The value of a fact lies not in its being what it is, but in the effect it produces. A historical series is valuable, not because it is true, but because being true, it, in consequence, produces certain effects upon the human mind. Could that same effect be produced by a fictitious narrative, it would be just as good. The same effect cannot be so produced, to be sure; and what does this prove? It proves that truth is capable of producing certain effects, of which fiction is incapable. This is all very well: but it happens to be true also of fiction, and to a much greater extent. This is no joke; but of it more by-and-by.

If we take a series of historical or other truths, its value seems to lie in this, that, being true, it forms, as it were, an extended experience. It serves as a rule of action for those who read it. To do this, the truth of the series is no doubt absolutely necessary. It is essential to the process. But it is in the effect upon the mind that the value really resides; and the truth of the record is only one aid, amongst others, to the production of that end. The sagacious personages who are, for the most part, accustomed to dogmatise upon this subject, take it broadly for granted that fiction is something directly the opposite of fact. They make them out at once to be as light and darkness, virtue and vice, or heat and cold. This is short-sighted work. There are no fictions absolute. None which do not in their essence partake of fact. For all fiction is, and must be, more or less, built upon nature. Nor have the most extravagant any very distant resemblance to it. We can only combine. It is beyond the power of man to invent anything which shall have no smack and admixture of reality throughout its whole. If it were possible, it would be incomprehensible. The wildest inventions are only partial departures from the order of nature. But to nature they always look back, and must ultimately be referred. They are no more dependent of her than a balloon is of the earth, although it may mount for a while above its surface. The connection between them may not be so obvious but it is no less certain.

Fact, then, is the primary substratum—the primitive granite—upon which all fiction is formed. And this being so, fiction has always more or less of the advantages of truth, besides superadded advantages peculiar to itself. In its employment we have this privilege. We can, at will, produce such a concatenation of supposed and yet natural events, as may be requisite to bring about the effect, and teach the lesson we wish. We can always do poetical justice. We need never want an instructive catastrophe. We escape that want of result to which accidental series are so liable; nor do we bring it about, as sometimes it happens in real life, through an unworthy instrument. The murderer who escapes at Newgate is punished upon the stage. Historical ruffians become heroes in an epic; and love, sometimes selfish in its origin, is ever pure in its poetry. The effect arising out of a good tragic or epic poem springs from the same principle as if it were from history. The experience we derive from it, though nominally artificial, is essentially, and to all intents, real. Fiction only enables us to render the effect more direct and complete than events might have done. We conduct the lightning where we want it; but it is not the less lightning. The "vantage-ground" gained by this faculty is unquestionably enormous. We can not only command the sequence of incident and the tides of passion, but we can exhibit them again and again, as often as we please. A century might have elapsed before the gradual progress of wickedness, and the torments of guilty ambition, were exhibited as fully and as much to the life, as they are in Macbeth and Richard III. A million of Italian intrigues might have been concocted and enacted, before treachery and jealousy were so completely anatomised as in Othello. But this is not all. In real life, be the series of events what they will, they are rarely manifested to any in their completeness. Dark deeds and intricacies of passion have few witnesses; and even these seldom witness their entire detail. They are only seen in their integrity in newspaper narratives and judicial reports; and then the passions of the actors are buried and lost in the verbiage of an editor or the dry technicality of legal inquiry. Now, in a theatre Macbeth murders and repents several times a week. Boxes, pit, and galleries are witnesses to the subtle poison of his ambition and the terrible shrinkings of his remorse. The lesson, which in nature would have been imprinted but once, is stereotyped by the art of the poet, and diffused amidst thousands who else had never known either its import or its name.

In the circle of the sciences the reign of Fact would, at first blush, seem to be fully established. Fiction there would either seem to be an open usurper, or at best a sort of Perkin Warbeck—a pretender who can only hope to succeed by counterfeiting the appearance of another. They, however, who acquiesce in this, see a short way into the question. The exact sciences, beautiful and invaluable as they are, seldom embrace the whole, even of the subjects of which they profess to treat.

> There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,
> Than are dreamt of in your—philosophy.

The simplest natural objects have bearings which calculation does not touch, and appearances and relations which definition fails to include. They must have a poor conception of "this goodly frame the earth,"—of "this brave overhanging firmament, this majestical roof, fretted with golden fire," who think that these, in all their infinitude of variety and beauty, can be ranged in categories, and ticketed and labelled in definitions. Can we get an idea of the splendour and odour of the flower by looking out genus and species in Linnæus? Do we hear the roar of the waterfall, or behold the tints of the rainbow, in the theory of acoustics, the law of falling bodies, and the prismatic decomposition of the solar ray? Can we strain an idea of a storm at sea out of an analysis of salt-water and the theories of the tides and winds? Can we compass the sublimity of the Heavenly vault by knowing every constellation, and every star of every magnitude, of every name and of every character, Latin or Greek, upon the celestial globe? Can geography or geology show us Mont Blanc in his unapproachable majesty, or Chaumoni in her beauty? It is vain to ask these questions. Of the sublimer qualities of objects, science (so called) affords no ideas. It gives us substance and measurement, but for the aggregate intellectual effect we must resort to imaginative description and the painting of the poet. He who never saw Dover Cliff will find it in King Lear, and not in the County History or the Transactions of the Geological Society. To him who never beheld a shipwreck, Falconer, Clark Russell and Alexander Stevens are better helps than the best calculation of the strength of timber, as opposed to the weight of a column of water multiplied into its velocity. If we want a full perception of the power of the beautiful, Professor Camper's facial angle, and Sir Joshua's waving line, sink to nothing before Shakespeare's Imogen or Cleopatra, or Kit Marlowe's description of Helen in the play of Faustus. All the topographical quartos that ever were written afford no such prospects as the Lady of the Lake or Thomson's Seasons. The true lover of flowers had rather read Lycidas, or Perdita's description of her garden, than hunt for "habitats" in herbals or botanists' guides;—and whether Glencoe or Borrodale be primary or secondary formations, their sublimity and grandeur remain the same, in freedom and in contempt of systems and scientific arrangements.

All this, however, is still not directly to the question. The point is—has fact or fiction produced the most important changes in society? This is the real gist of the matter, and as this is answered, so must the dispute terminate. It sounds perhaps somewhat like a parodox, yet the reply must be given in favour of the latter. Let us look at it. The exact sciences have, without doubt, most changed the outward and bodily frame and condition of society. But the great mutations of the world have not their origin in these things. They spring from those causes, whatever they may be, which soften the manners, modify the passions, and at once enlarge and purify the current of public thought. The Spartan legislator who punished the poet for adding another string to his lyre well knew this. A people are the most quickly affected through their imaginative literature. A few ballads have altered the character and destiny of a nation. The troubadours were amongst the most early and most successful civilisers of Europe. The obscure writers of romances, fabliaux, and metrical legends were the most potent changers of the face of society. Upon a barbarous and treacherous brutality they gradually ingrafted an overstrained courtesy and the most romantic maxims of love and honour. Romance, the mother of chivalry, at length devoured her offspring, Don Quixote and the Knight of the Burning Pestle put down the errant-knights and paladins; and what Archbishop Turpin and the author of Amadis began Cervantes and Fletcher ended. Looking at the literature of England, it is certain that the plays of Shakespeare and his fellows have produced a greater effect upon the English mind than the Principia of Newton. Had the laws of attraction never been demonstrated, and the planetary system of Ptolemy remained uncontroverted, the general intellect would have been much as it is. These great truths come little into common use. They do not mix themselves with our daily concerns. We love, hate, hope, fear and revenge, without once considering, or caring, whether the earth revolves from west to east, or from east to west. Whatever stimulates or purges our passions—whatever gives a higher pulse to generosity, or a deeper blush to villiany—whatever has enriched pity with tears, or love with sighs—whatever has exalted patriotism and laid bare ambition—that it is which ferments and works in the mind of a nation, until it has brought it to the relish of its own vintage, be it good or evil. Such were the writings of Shakespeare and his great contemporaries, Spenser, Marlow, Fletcher, Chapman, Dekker, and "the immortal and forgotten Webster." In all ages, the imaginative writers, when they had scope, have exhibited the same powers of changing and moulding the habits of a nation. The Puritanical authors of the Commonwealth turned England into a penitentiary; and the wits and poets of Charles II., by way of revenge, next turned it into a brothel—until the poetical satires of Pope, and the moral wit of Addison, Steel, Swift, Arbuthnot and Gay, again helped to "purge it to a sound and pristine health." Look over the page of history where we will, and the footsteps of the poet, the dramatist, and the essayist, may be traced as plainly as those of the lawgiver and the philosopher. Amongst the light stores of the playwright, the novelist, and the ballad-maker, must the historian and the antiquary look for materials as well as amidst the graver annals of their predecessors. He who wishes to ascertain Hannibal's route across the Alps must read Silius Italicus as well as Polybius. He who wishes to behold the true features of the Rebellion of Forty-five must read the Jacobite Relics as well as the Culloden Papers. The antiquary who would illustrate the idiom, manners and dress of Queen Elizabeth's reign, must go to Shakespeare, Lyly and Heywood. Nay, even the politician who would construct a perfect commonwealth must read Plato, More, Sir John Harrington, Swift and Lord Erskine, as well as Montesquieu or Locke.

There is yet another view to be taken of this question, and that perhaps the most decisive. It is this—that fiction has probably contributed in a double proportion to the sum of human delight. If then rational and innocent enjoyment be the end of life—(and if it be not, what is?)—there is little more to be said.

Jottings.

At the last meeting of the Public Libraries and Technical Instruction Committee a unanimous vote of thanks was passed to the Chairman, Mr. Councillor Weaver Smith, for the genial and cordial manner in which he had discharged the duties appertaining to his office during the year.

Owing to delay in issuing the current number of "Library Notes," we are enabled to give a partial list of the new Libraries Committee, which will be found on the cover.

A large number of popular books, which, owing to continual and heavy wear, had been withdrawn, have now been replaced, both at the Central and Branch Libraries.

Borrowers wishing to renew their books are requested not to bring them to the Library for this purpose. All that is required is a slip of paper bearing the number of the book and name of the borrower. Borrowers must return all the volumes of a work, in several volumes, at the same time; in no case will one volume alone be received.

Copies of the "Library Notes," containing special lists of books on Essex (No. 15) and Music (Nos. 21-22) may still be obtained on application in the Lending Libraries.

The death is announced of the Rev. Isaac Taylor, the well-known philologist. Dr. Taylor was born at Stanford Rivers, Essex, May 2, 1829. In 1875 he was presented to the Rectory of Settrington, in Yorkshire, where he undertook systematic researches into the origin and history of the alphabet. One of his earliest works was "Words and Places, or Etymological Illustrations of History, Ethnology, and Geography." (877 E.), a work on the etymology of local names.

With a view of bringing the "Contents-Subject-Index" within the reach of all our readers, it has been decided to supply a number of bound copies at a reduced price.

With a few exceptions, the Index relates entirely to the books in the West Ham Libraries, and will be found of very great service in directing the readers to works containing information on thousands of subjects, upon many of which no books have been published. It is also useful for the biographical and descriptive notes it contains.

Some excellent aids to Biblical students have recently been added to the Central Reference Library. The most noteworthy of these are: "The Encyclopædia Biblica," edited by T. K. Cheyne and J. S. Black; "A Dictionary of the Bible," edited by J. Hastings; and "The Polychrome Bible," edited by P. Haupt.

In connection with the Course of Lectures now being given in the Technical Institute, on "Social and Industrial England," the following books, mentioned in the Syllabus of the course, will be found in the Central Library:—Trail's "Social England," R.L.; Gardiner's "History of England," 3310-2, B; Kemble's "Saxons in England," 3895 B; Ashley's "Economic History," 813 D; Cunningham's "Growth of English Industry and Commerce," 366 D; Cunningham and McArthur's "Outlines of English Industrial History," 727 D; H. de B. Gibbon's "Industrial History of England," 92 and 138 D; Toynbee's "Industrial Revolution," 414 D; G. Armitage Smith's "The Free Trade Movement," 676 D; Escott's "England," 458 D; Thorold Rogers' "Work and Wages," 186 D; Dr. Von Schulze-Gaevernitz's 'Social Peace," 61 D; Bushill's "Profit-Sharing and the Labour Question," 790 D; Holman's "English National Education," 117 D; Sir F. Pollock's "The Land Laws," 194 D; Green's "Making of England," R.L.; Loftie's "London," 466 C; Besant's "History of London," 418 C. The special list of books on King Alfred which appeared in a recent number of "Library Notes," will also be of considerable service.

„ Juvenile „ 2d.; „ 8d

West Ham Herald.—"We need only say that these Catalogues quite come up to the standard of excellence we have learned to expect in our Free Library publications."

West Ham Guardian.—"They have been classified in such a manner that any book can be found with a minimum of trouble. The excellent innovation has been made for giving contents of Magazines."

Forest Gate Weekly News.—"We have gone very carefully through these Catalogues, and have noted with pleasure how judicious have been the selections, and how thoroughly up to date the books are."

Canning Town General Catalogue, Boards, 6d.; Cloth, 1 -

Saturday Review.—"The General Catalogue of the Canning Town Library is one of the best books of its kind we have examined. We have had to comment with some severity of late years upon the slovenly preparation and confused method of various Public Library Catalogues. It is the more pleasant, therefore, to find this work admirable in arrangement, and remarkable for clearness and simplicity of treatment."

Canning Town Juvenile Catalogue, Boards, 3d.; Cloth, 6d.

The Athenæum.—"It is well arranged, with short descriptive notes and Subject Index."

Literary World.—"The Juvenile Catalogue of the West Ham Public Libraries might well serve as a model for future works of this kind."

London.—"This Catalogue will add greatly to the value of the Juvenile Library. Biographical and other notes have been inserted, and important articles included in many interesting works are catalogued under their respective subject headings, rendering an otherwise dry catalogue both interesting and instructive."

E. Walford, Esq., M.A.—"I most willingly bear my testimony to the value of your work."

Prof. Dziatzko, University Library, Gottingen.—"It is a most useful work."

W. Beer, Esq., Librarian, Howard Memorial Library, New Orleans.—"I am delighted with your excellent Index."

Daily Chronicle.—"The Subject Index to the contents of the books in the West Ham Public Libraries, will be of general service as a bibliography, and it will to some extent act as a supplement to Poole's Index to Periodical Literature, 1887-91, giving the principal contents of many of the leading magazines for 1892-97."

Dublin Review.—"The Editor of the Dublin Review (Canon Moyes) desires to thank you for the specimen copy of the Contents Subject Index, of which he has formed a high opinion, and has already found useful."

West Ham Library Notes (published quarterly), 1d.; Annual Subscription, 6d.

Educational Review.—"'Library Notes' contains descriptive notes of fresh additions to the Libraries, and also a list of interesting articles in current magazines and reviews. We congratulate the West Ham Library on the issue of this comprehensive, yet concise, journal, and express the hope that other Public Libraries will follow the example; for, as yet, we believe there are only two libraries which have adopted this admirable plan."

Literary World.—"The Committee of the West Ham Public Libraries are a progressive body. Their latest departure is 'West Ham Library Notes,' to deal exclusively with the libraries and library matters."

Literary World.—"The West Ham Public Libraries' report is very complete and encouraging. It is mainly statistical and analytical in its presentation of facts."

West Ham Herald.—"The Report of the Public Libraries presents us with an interesting account of the Public Library movement in West Ham. It is made additionally useful by the compilation of a number of lists and tables. These tables are extremely interesting."

West Ham Guardian.—"Our attention is drawn to the striking fact that out of the total issue of books, little more than one-third have been works of fiction. Another satisfactory point brought out by the West Ham statistics is that the libraries are used by every class, but chiefly by the working classes."

Souvenir of the Opening of the Central Library, 1898. Paper, 2 6; Cloth, 5 -

West Ham Herald.—"The work is of the highest class. The portraits of West Ham's leading public men are capitally reproduced."

LONDON: A BRIEF HISTORICAL SKETCH.

WITH a desire to bring more prominently to the public notice the Extensive and Valuable Collection of Books on London and its Environs contained in the West Ham Public Libraries, we intend to publish lists of these Works in successive numbers of the "Library Notes," until the whole collection has been covered.

The first list appears in this number, and it has been thought not inappropriate to preface it by the following brief sketch:—

London, the greatest City in the world, no doubt owes much of its importance to the fact that it is situated in the centre of the land surface of the globe, and on the banks of an important navigable river, within easy access of the sea. Like many other great cities, the origin of London is shrouded in mystery. When the Romans came to Britain, B.C. 55, they found that the Ancient Britons had a settlement and fortress on the northern banks of the Thames, which they called Llyndin (the Lake Fort). The Romans, unable to pronounce Llyn, in the British way Thlin, called it Lon, hence their word Londinium. This British Fort lay between the Walbrook and the Fleet, a distance of nearly 900 yards, and if we suppose the width of the fort to be 500 yards, then about 100 acres was occupied by the first London. Of the aspect of the town in those days, very little is known; the Romans built a citadel on the east side of the Walbrook, and considerably extended the limits of London. The two things which most marked the Roman occupation were London Wall and Bridge. The Bridge crossed the Thames by the road from Dover to Watling Street and Ermyn Street. The wall was erected about A.D. 306, was three miles long, 22 feet high, and eight feet thick. It remained the city wall for more than a thousand years, and was rebuilt, repaired, and restored at different times. The scanty remains of it existing to-day, a few fragments here and there, contain very little of the original wall; but its course was never altered.

When the Romans in 410 were forced to leave Britain in order to defend their own country, London was left in a very unprotected condition. It was surrounded by marshes, and had no means of providing food for itself. All the food for its population of 70,000 or more was brought on pack asses along the four great roads from other parts of the island. The most important of these was Watling Street, which passed out at Newgate and led across the heart of the country to Chester and Wales, to York and the North, and was also connected with Dover by way of London Bridge. The second, afterwards called Ermyn Street, left the City at Bishopsgate and ran through Lincoln to York. A third road, called the Vicinal Way, ran through the Ald Gate to the Eastern Counties. Gradually the Saxon invaders secured these roads and the river, and cut off all food supplies from London, forcing the inhabitants to desert it, when the East Saxons easily entered and took it. After passing into the hands of the Mercians and of the Danes, King Alfred recovered it in 884. This illustrious king has left many imperishable monuments of his reign, which are recorded in the many books relating to him in our Library, of which a list was given in a previous issue of "Library Notes." One of the greatest is the "City of London," which he rebuilt. A recent historian says that it would hardly be wrong to write, "London was founded rather more than a thousand years ago by King Alfred, who chose for the site of his city a place formerly fortified by the Romans, but desolated successively by the Saxons and the Danes." Alfred rebuilt the wall, and London was too strong now to be retaken by the Danes, or to be pillaged as in former years. In the early history of London, frequent mention is made of disastrous fires; thus we read that in 893 London was nearly destroyed by fire and Alfred immediately re-built it, while in 961 St. Paul's Church, which had been built by King Ethelbert in 610, was also destroyed by fire. It was rebuilt the same year, probably almost entirely of wood. The Anglo-Saxon Londoners were, as a rule, craftsmen or traders, although at first all ships belonged to foreign merchants. But before the Conquest, English-built ships and English-manned fleets had started trading. The traders soon became wealthy merchants, but some of the craftsmen lived very roughly and endured many hardships; their dwellings were crowded into narrow lanes, and being constructed chiefly of wood, they were always in danger of fire, and in 962, in 1087, and again in 1135, the greater part of the City was burned to the ground. They lived, however, in plenty, there was work for all, they had their folk mote—their City parliament—and their ward mote, which still exists. They had no feudal lord to harass them, and were a free, cheerful, and contented people. Since the days of King Alfred, London and its citizens, while building up their own history, have also determined to a great extent much of the history of our country. When William the Conqueror received the submission of the City, he gave the citizens a Charter, their first charter of freedom, and there can be no doubt that it was the price demanded by the citizens, and willingly paid by William in return for their submission. The document is short, but upon it the whole future of the City depended. It runs thus: "William, King, greets William, Bishop, and Gosfrith, Portreeve, and all the burghers within London, French and English, friendly.

"I do you to wit that I will that ye be all law worthy that were in King Edward's day, and I will that every child be his father's heir after his father's day: and I will not endure that any man offer any wrong to you. God keep you."

The City had no Lord but the King, but the City with its strong walls, its great multitude of people, and its resources, might prove so independent as to lock out the King, so William commenced to build the Tower, so as not only to keep an enemy out of London, but also to keep a strong hand on the burghers. In 1189 the Portreeve or first Magistrate of London was styled the Mayor, the title Lord Mayor came later as a title of courtesy. By the twelfth century the city had seven double gates, Aldgate, Bishopsgate, Cripplegate, Aldersgate, Newgate, Ludgate, and the Bridge. The Royal Palace at Westminster was two miles from the City on the west, fortified with ramparts and connected with the City by a populous suburb. Already, therefore, the Strand and Charing Cross were settled. The Chepe, whose name is retained in Cheapside, was a great open space where a market was held every day during the year, and where everything could be bought in covered wooden sheds. The names of Bread Street, Milk Street, Wood Street still show what trades were carried on there. Londoners were always pleased to welcome foreigners, and a colony of Flemish or Easterling merchants from the Baltic Sea settling in London were the cause of the word "sterling" being used in connection with cash payments. The northern parts of London were not yet built over, but later on some great monasteries were established there. At Smithfield or Smooth Field, just outside the City walls, there was a horse fair once a week, and the young men of London played ball, wrestled, leaped, practised arms and archery there. In the thirteenth century representatives of many newly-founded religious orders settled in London, the Franciscans, who had Grey Friars House, now the Blue Coat School; the Dominicans or Black Friars, who established themselves in the place still known by their name—Blackfriars; the Knights Templars, the Knights of St. John, and many others. All the Religious Houses were dissolved at the Reformation, but the influence of the work done in them will never be lost. During the fourteenth, fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, despite plague, famine and fire, which often visited London, the city gradually became a place of splendid palaces, houses, churches and monasteries. Somerset House, which is built on the foundations of the old house of that name, gives us an idea of the size of a great man's house in those days. Crosby Hall is now the only specimen left of the ancient wealth and splendour of a city merchant, but a visit to it will show how the great merchants of London in that time loved to be housed.

In the Tudor period London continued to flourish, owing to the industry and commercial ability of its citizens, among whom stands prominently Sir Thomas Gresham, who helped to make the trade of London greater than that of any other port in the world. He founded and built the first Royal Exchange, he gave up his own house in Broad Street for a college, he endowed it with professorships, and intended it to become for London what Christ Church was to Oxford. Nor must we overlook that famous London citizen, Sir Richard Whittington, who, early in the fifteenth century, was the richest man in the city, was Mayor four times, effected many improvements in the metropolis in his lifetime, and bequeathed large sums of money at his death in order to advance the prosperity and education of the citizens. Among other things he founded a library at Guildhall, and another at the Hospital of St. Bartholomew. When the English drama arose, the first theatre was built in London in 1570. Thirty years after there were seven erected outside the city, as they were not allowed within the precincts of the city walls. Mention has already been made of plagues and fires as frequent visitants to London of which little is known, but the great plague of 1665 and the great fire of the following year are well known historical facts. The fire burnt down about five-sixths of London, cleared out most of the plague spots in the city, and gave the splendid and unique chance to that famous architect, Sir Christopher Wren, who rebuilt St. Paul's Cathedral and about forty or fifty churches during the next thirty years. As time went on the city grew, the wards became densely populated, houses and extensive suburbs sprang up at Whitechapel, Wapping, Smithfield, Lambeth, Bermondsey and Rotherhithe, the aldermen no longer knew their people, nor did the men of any ward know each other as of yore. During the eighteenth century the wealth and luxury of city merchants surpassed everything ever recorded or even imagined. They lived in stately and commodious houses, many of which still survive, they had their country houses, they drove in chariots, and were truly merchant princes. As they lived to a great extent within the city their wealth was observed and known by all. During the last century all this has changed. From nightfall till morning the city is almost deserted nowadays, and it is only when we give a thought to the immense suburbs of London, and the enormous traffic to and from the city, and all parts of the metropolis every day, that we can realize the extent and importance of the commercial and other transactions that are carried on, and that the city itself is now entirely devoted to business and to the making of wealth, while the merchants reside in the suburbs, or elsewhere. The old picturesque life, with its street cries; apprentice boys, with their games and their quarrels; the gardens, the monasteries, the fairs, all have disappeared, until we have the city as we know it to-day, the central point of a vast Greater London, the extension of which there even yet seems to be no end.

Our article is necessarily short, and many interesting features of London history and life have been passed by—e.g., the prisons and similar unhappy homes of poor souls, in which long days of sadness and remorse were spent. Our heartfelt gratitude be theirs, who like John Howard and our own estimable townswoman, Elizabeth Fry, spent their lives in consoling these unfortunates in their unhappiness and despair, and leading them to a more noble and useful life.

Jottings.

In this number of "Library Notes" we have pleasure in giving, as a frontispiece, an excellent portrait of His Worship the Mayor, Mr. Councillor L. W. Spratt, J.P., taken by Messrs Elliott and Fry. Councillor Spratt, who has been a member of the Council since 1892, is so well known for the great interest he has taken in the municipal government and work of the borough that a detailed account of his career would be superfluous here.

Mr. Alderman F. H. Billows, J.P., whose portrait we are also able to give, was a councillor from 1896 to 1901, and last November was made an Alderman and Deputy Mayor of the Borough. He joined the Library Committee in November, 1897, and has been a member ever since; in November, 1899, he was elected chairman of the Public Libraries and Technical Institution Committee, which office he again holds. Alderman Billows takes a keen interest in all library and educational matters, as also in every other department of municipal work.

It is with much regret that we learn of the death of Mr. E. W. Smith, son of Mr. Alderman Moore Smith, J.P., who held an important office under the Indian Government, and who has recently died of cholera, his death taking place in India, in the Forest of Bahraich, Oudh. The deceased gentleman took great interest in the Borough Libraries, and presented to the Central Reference Library several of his valuable and interesting works, containing many splendid and historical illustrations and descriptions of Indian architecture and antiquities. An inspection of these beautiful and interesting books will fully repay the trouble of a visit to the Library. The Library can ill afford to lose friends whose interest is shown in so practical a manner.

Mr. T. Threlford, son of Mr. Councillor Threlford, has recently compiled a valuable work which will be of great interest and use to all persons interested in poultry. It is entitled "The Poultry Club Standards," and contains among much useful information a complete description of all the recognised varieties of fowls. The book, which is published by Messrs. Cassell and Co., contains an excellent introduction by Mr. Lewis Wright. In recognition of his services in compiling this work Mr. Threlford has received from the Poultry Club, of which he is Vice-President, a solid silver tea service. A copy of the work has been accepted by Her Majesty the Queen.

In "The Builder," vol. 81, illustrations of some fine examples of early and late 18th century hammered ironwork are given; one example is taken from Forest Lane, and two others are described as being in Romford Road, Stratford. One is a copy of the gate in front of Mr. Alderman Bethell's house, and the other is in front of a house near to it.

Mr. Thomas Greenwood, the well-known publisher, is erecting a monument in the Isle of Wight to the memory of Edward Edwards, the founder of English Public Libraries. After the ceremony of unveiling the monument, Dr. R. Garnett, C.B., LL.D , will address the visitors, among whom will be several of the leading Librarians and Authors of the country. Mr. Greenwood has invited the Borough Librarian, Mr. A. Cotgreave, to attend.

We have received the first number of "The Light in the East," issued by the students of our Municipal Institute. It is full of witty sayings and useful and valuable notes. Among the contributors are Dr. Pagenstecher, and the Principal of the Institute, Mr. Briscoe. We feel assured that if succeeding numbers are as ably written and edited as the one before us, we can prognosticate a long and useful life for this interesting magazine.

Mr. C. W. F. Goss, Librarian of the Bishopsgate Institute, has compiled a catalogue which is much more than a mere list of books, and will be of use both to the student and the general reader. Valuable notes are given on all the most important books in the Library, which will increase their value manifold and be a blessing and a boon to every reader in any library which possesses this useful work.

Copies of "The Stratford Co-operator," for December, 1898, and June, 1899, are required to complete volume iii. of the Library set. If any of our readers possess copies of these numbers, for which they have no further use, they would be welcomed either as gifts or purchases by the Librarian.

Our readers will find in this number of "Library Notes" the first part of a list of books relating to London, which can be consulted in the Central Reference Library. The list, which will be continued in successive numbers of the "Notes" until completed, is annotated and arranged generally under subjects, and contains many books, some of which are rare and costly, while all are interesting.

LIBRARY PUBLICATIONS, &c.

Central Lending Library Catalogue, in Cloth Gilt, 2/6.

,, Juvenile ,, in Paper 2d.; Cloth Gilt, 8d.

West Ham Herald.—"We need only say that these Catalogues quite come up to the standard of excellence we have learned to expect in our Free Library publications."

West Ham Guardian.—"They have been classified in such a manner that any book can be found with a minimum of trouble. The excellent innovation has been made for giving contents of Magazines."

Forest Gate Weekly News.—"We have gone very carefully through these Catalogues, and have noted with pleasure how judicious have been the selections, and how thoroughly up to date the books are."

Canning Town General Catalogue, Boards, 6d.; Cloth, 1/-

Saturday Review.—"The General Catalogue of the Canning Town Library is one of the best books of its kind we have examined. We have had to comment with some severity of late years upon the slovenly preparation and confused method of various Public Library Catalogues. It is the more pleasant, therefore, to find this work admirable in arrangement, and remarkable for clearness and simplicity of treatment."

Canning Town Juvenile Catalogue, Boards, 3d.; Cloth, 6d.

The Athenæum.—"It is well arranged, with short descriptive notes and Subject Index."

Literary World.—"The Juvenile Catalogue of the West Ham Public Libraries might well serve as a model for future works of this kind."

London.—"This Catalogue will add greatly to the value of the Juvenile Library. Biographical and other notes have been inserted, and important articles included in many interesting works are catalogued under their respective subject headings, rendering an otherwise dry catalogue both interesting and instructive."

Subject Index to the Contents of the Books in the West Ham Public Libraries, &c.

Published at 10/6 net. Price to West Ham Readers, Cloth, 3/6; Boards, 2/-; in Parts, unbound, 1/6.

E. Walford, Esq., M.A.—"I most willingly bear my testimony to the value of your work."

Prof. Dziatzko, University Library, Gottingen.—"It is a most useful work."

W. Beer, Esq., Librarian, Howard Memorial Library, New Orleans.—"I am delighted with your excellent Index."

Daily Chronicle.—"The Subject Index to the contents of the books in the West Ham Public Libraries, will be of general service as a bibliography, and it will to some extent act as a supplement to Poole's Index to Periodical Literature, 1887-91, giving the principal contents of many of the leading magazines for 1892-97."

Dublin Review.—"The Editor of the Dublin Review (Canon Moyes) desires to thank you for the specimen copy of the Contents Subject Index, of which he has formed a high opinion, and has already found useful.

West Ham Library Notes (published quarterly), 1d.; Annual Subscription, 6d.

Educational Review.—"'Library Notes' contains descriptive notes of fresh additions to the Libraries, and also a list of interesting articles in current magazines and reviews. We congratulate the West Ham Library on the issue of this comprehensive, yet concise, journal, and express the hope that other Public Libraries will follow the example; for, as yet, we believe there are only two libraries which have adopted this admirable plan."

Literary World.—"The Committee of the West Ham Public Libraries are a progressive body. Their latest departure is 'West Ham Library Notes,' to deal exclusively with the libraries and library matters."

Indicator Key to Fiction, Boards, 4d.

Indicator Key to Juvenile Books, Paper, 2d.

Selected List of Books in the Central Reference Library, Paper, 1d.

Selected List of Books in the Canning Town Reference Library, Paper, 1d.

Special Report, 1892, Paper, 1d.

General Report, 1890-1895, with Supplementary Catalogue. Paper, 3d.

Reports for Various Years since 1895. Paper, 1d. each.

Literary World.—"The West Ham Public Libraries' report is very complete and encouraging. It is mainly statistical and analytical in its presentation of facts."

West Ham Herald.—"The Report of the Public Libraries presents us with an interesting account of the Public Library movement in West Ham. It is made additionally useful by the compilation of a number of lists and tables. These tables are extremely interesting."

West Ham Guardian.—"Our attention is drawn to the striking fact that out of the total issue of books, little more than one-third have been works of fiction. Another satisfactory point brought out by the West Ham statistics is that the libraries are used by every class, but chiefly by the working classes."

Souvenir of the Opening of the Central Library, 1898. Paper, 2/6; Cloth, 5/-
